CONSIDER MEXICAN BORDER TROUBLES

DELEGATIONS WILL MEET AT EL PASO, TEXAS, ON SATURDAY

Hope to Work Out Treaties to Stop Smuggling and Other Problems—Questions of Conspiracy, traffic in Gold, Arms, Ammunition and Narcotics Will Be Taken Up.

An American delegation headed by Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury, left Sunday for El Paso, Texas, where they will meet representatives of the Mexican government May 15 in a conference on border questions. It is the hope of the administration that treaties can be worked out for the cooperative handling of smuggling and other border problems.

The American delegation included representatives of four government departments: Mr. Andrews H. S. Coughlin, in charge of customs at San Francisco and Colonel L. G. Nutt, chief of the narcotic section, for the treasury; William R. Vallance, assistant solicitor for the state department; A. W. Henderson, special assistant to the attorney general and H. R. Gamble, assistant United States attorney at El Paso for the department of justice and assistant Secretary Henning for the department of labor.

Since the negotiations of border treaties with Canada a year ago government agencies at Washington concerned with law enforcement on the borders have been working to establish a similar arrangement with Mexico. Mr. Andrews is optimistic as to the outlook, believing that the Mexican authorities are anxious to join hands with the United States in view of the fact that the law enforcement will be made easier for each government if satisfactory treaties can be made.

The smuggling problem on the Mexican border has been more serious in some respects than that which was taken care of in the Canadian treaties. One of the chief difficulties on the southern line has had to do more with narcotics, with smuggling of aliens a close second, while on the northern border, liquor smuggling required the greatest attention. For this reason, customs officers and officials of the labor department and the narcotic problems of Commissioner Haynes, prohibition forces will be more important factors in the forthcoming conference, than in the meeting with the Canadian representatives.

Liquor running has been increasing lately along the main border, however and Mr. Andrews will seek closer cooperation among the various government agencies having to do with law enforcement there to cut down this traffic. He has had several conferences with other government departments on this phase of the work, but date nothing tangible has developed.

Mr. Andrews said he would press for understandings with Mexico looking to joint action by the two governments in suppressing all kinds of smuggling operations; exchange of information between the two nations with regard to international conspiracies and extradition of persons violating the narcotic laws of either government. Questions of traffic in gold, arms and ammunition also will be taken up, but officials at Washington were unwilling to discuss these features.

Columbus, May 9—Samuel R. Boggs Philadelphia, national president of the Gideons, attacked Warden P. E. Thomas of the Ohio penitentiary for giving address the men at Ohio pen on Mothers' Day. The warden answered that him "only ten minutes" in which to the program had already been filled and that Boggs was "just jealous" and had the wrong idea of what Mothers' Day was for.

HAMPP FAMILY PICTURED IN THE NON-SKID

In its issue of May 6, "The Firestone Non-Skid," a paper printed by the Firestone Tire and Rubber company of Akron, had the picture of Mrs. Sarah Hampp, of this city, her son, William E. Hampp and his two boys, Paul and Joseph.

Accompanying the pictures was the following article complimentary to the family and pleasing to their many friends in Old Roundtown:

"Three finer representatives of original Buckeye settlers than the Hampp family would be hard to find at Firestone and they all work at steel products.

"William E. Hampp, the father, is foreman of accessory inspecting and has been at the Rim plant for more than eight years. He is well known for his interest in the Kenmore Home and School League. The family home is in Circleville, where 'Grandma' Hampp has recently been seriously ill.

"Paul Hampp, the older son, also in the inspecting department, is one of the Akron university students working at Firestone on the cooperation plan. Paul is a member of the University Debating club and is president of the C. E. society of the Kenmore Reformed church.

"Joe Hampp is employed at the Rim plant on looking rims. He is already quite a hunter and fisherman having a number of fine trophies to show as evidence of his ability as a sportsman."

Columbus, O., May 9—Guilford Gosney, who says his father is a wealthy Houston, Texas, oil man, plead guilty today to stealing a fraternity pin at the Ohio State university and was sentenced to 30 days in the workhouse. Gosney said he failed in his studies at the university at Christmas and had been living here since on remittances from his father. He stole the pin he said "to make a flash with a coed."

STRUCK BY SWING AND LEG BROKEN

Little Mary Elizabeth Groce Met With Accident on School Grounds.

Mary Elizabeth, the seven year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Groce of East Main street, sustained a fracture of the left leg last Wednesday while attending school at the High street building.

The pupils were forming in line to enter the building when one of swings struck the child and threw her to the ground. In falling her left leg was twisted and she fell on it breaking it just above the ankle. She was taken to the office of Dr. B. R. Bales where the fracture was reduced.

SHOULD DIM AUTO LIGHTS AS DIRECTED

Failure to Observe Law is Responsible for Many Fatalities and Injuries.

No one factor at night is responsible for more motor fatalities and injuries than the glaring headlight. Thursday night four Cincinnati firemen rushing to a duty which in itself is supremely dangerous, were catapulted over a high embankment because a criminally negligent motorist failed to dim his lights. Three were injured seriously. Only by a mere miracle did they escape death.

There is a law on the statute books of the state of Ohio decreeing that automobile lights shall be dimmed when approaching and passing another vehicle. The law is on the book—but not on the highway. More than half the motorists met in night driving on city streets or rural roads, flagrantly disregard this law. Weeks, death and injury result. The motor car driver responsible for such fatalities is no less guilty of manslaughter than he who in any other manner kills without premeditation or when breaking a law.

The dimming law, state and city, should be enforced to the limit. But that is not enough. It is impossible for any force of police or constabulary to check up on the thousands of cars on the highway. The motor car operator must consider himself personally responsible for the safety of the road. Dim those lights! Perhaps by so doing you may save a life. Driving of an automobile should be marked by at least half as much courtesy and consideration as one shows at other moments. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

PRESIDENT ADDRESSES CONFERENCE

Voice of Nation is For Liberty, Order and Sacredness of Human Rights.

President Coolidge, opening the national oratorical contest with an address at Washington, declared that the United States has "a weighty responsibility not only for maintaining its own welfare, liberties and power, but for the utmost possible contribution toward organizing the nations and peoples in the aspirations and ways of peace."

"Here is a field for institutional development to which the thoughts of men and women everywhere are turned as they never were before," he continued. "The their scale is greater yet the problems in this realm of world organizations are essentially the same as these to which mankind has been addressing itself from the beginning of society."

"These are the problems of assuring justice alike to the weak and the strong, of assuring peace with honor, of enthroning conscience in places of authority too long usurped by mere force. The same humanity that has been able to erect the rule of law and liberty on the scale of great nations and mighty federations will at last find institutions by which to place international relations upon the same sure foundations."

Recalling that he had given an address when a similar contest was conducted at Washington a year ago, the president reminded his hearers that he had observed then that "there never was a time when our institutions were so universally being subjected to intimate scrutiny and close consideration as they are today."

"I urged the special importance of closely studying our institutions in order that the people might be equipped intelligently to defend them. Since that suggestion was advanced we have literally taken a national referendum on the subject of our constitutional system, and I am glad to be able to report that the verdict was overwhelmingly in favor of sustaining that system and going on to perfect it."

"The voice of the nation has been heard. It spoke with emphasis that none could possibly misunderstand. It declared for ordered liberty, for constitutional procedures, for the maintained sanctity of the courts, the rule of law, the security of property and the sacredness of human rights."

Mr. Coolidge said he had been amazed to learn that the seven school children in the finals were the survivors in a nation wide competition in which the number of boys and girls taking part had reached the total of 1,400,000. Referring to the subject of the orations, the Federal Constitution, he added:

"Turning our eyes to the future who can doubt that these studies of the underlying elements in our government constitute a pledge of security for those institutions in all the years to come?"

Polka Dots and Coin Spots in Limelight

Dots and spots, polka dots and coin spots are to deluge us this season like an April shower. They range in size from pinheads to large harlequins, and of course appear in all the long range of colors used in fabrics, in graduated sizes and in graded tones and shades they form the borders for plain garments.

Dots fall into raindrops, expressed into stripes worked out in harmonious colors. Dots also appear in squares of various sizes, and they outline buds, blossoms and flowers, and they appear in scrolls as well.

Dots and stripes are the most primitive designs known to man. It remains for the modern designers to bring them up to date, and this they have done by developing them into borders, and into such a variety of sizes and colors as to surpass any previous move in the history of the textile industry.

There is an appealing little romance in the history of the ubiquitous polka dot. In the year 1830, Anna Slezak a farm girl living near Prague in Bohemia, originated a dance. It is recorded that the room in which she practiced her new dance was so small that of a necessity her steps were very short, or only half-steps. So she called it "Pulka," for pulka is the word in her Bohemian tongue that meant half. The craze for this dance swept the civilized world, much as jazz has taken possession of the contemporary mind. At the height of its fashion, the name was given to a new dress goods pattern. Of course, the word had been Anglicized to "polka," and from that day to this, a small dotted design has been known as the polka-dot.

Sisters to the polka-dot are the pin-dot and the coin-spot, the former being smaller and the latter larger.

Kerchief Latest Fancy for Neck and Shoulders

The kerchief is the latest idea illustrating the fancy for an ornamental bit of softness to drape about the neck and shoulders. It consists of a square of silk or crepe the size of a small shawl, and its pattern is that of Rumanian, or whatsoever. Or it may be printed in gay colors more or less primitive in the drawing, Spanish, Russian, Rumanian. Or it may be hand painted or embroidered in whatever design is preferred. The bold, richly colored designs of the folkcraft of central Europe, the peasant needlework, prim and sober, the batik and ultra-modern are pictured with the rarest dyes on backgrounds of white, black or any one of many brilliant or delicate shades.

The pattern is always elaborate, covering the corners in large space, and sometimes a border all around the kerchief. The glory of this scarf is a fringe, 15 to 18 inches deep, made of heavy silk floss, knotted by hand. The manner of wearing these kerchiefs is quaintly pretty, for women draw them close about their shoulders over a decollete or sheer evening gown. They give an impression that is somewhat that of a gypsy—somewhat that of a lady of formal ways.

Spring Skirts

Plaits are a feature in spring skirts. No rule governs their placing except that they are not to go evenly all the way round. There may be an inverted plait or two inverted at the center front, panel style, or a group of five plaits at the front or one side, or both sides, or just a few box or side plaits at the side, stitched to within a few inches of the bottom. Where a belt is given with the skirt it is a wide one after the style of the belts on the sports dresses.

STATUES OF LAVA ON EASTER ISLAND

Modern Scientists at Loss to Account for Cult.

Easter Island, in the South Pacific, which recently was reported to have vanished in a submarine convulsion, still waves its fringed palms in air. Capt. Alfred Kling sends to Illustrierte Zeitung, Berlin, an account of some of its peculiarities.

"In former times," the captain writes, "the tribes and clans on the island lived in constant warfare with each other. The captives were eaten. Many human bones still lie about in the caves of the island. The original Kanakas had a very queer cult, for which they built gigantic statues of lava. The biggest of these statues is that of the thunder god. It is twenty-one meters long and seven meters wide and weighs twenty tons. Whether these stone monuments were idols or the statues of famous island personalities cannot be ascertained.

"Some of the monuments carry a mysterious hieroglyphic script. There are about 555 of these giants, the tokens of former civilization. In 1863 the island was discovered by Peru slave dealers, who caught the majority of the Kanakas and took them by force to the Peruvian guano islands, where they died of epidemics.

"The island people own wild chickens and pigs. The chickens fly like pheasants and stay at night in the trees. The owners identify their chickens by cuts on the toes. Wildcats are the only game on Easter Island. Daytime is determined by the position of the sun. Tobacco plants grow on the island. The natives use banana leaves as cigarette paper; they always carry a provision of banana leaves at their belt.

"I could never quite find out how marital conditions were on the island. It seemed to me that marriage among members of the same household was prohibited. A violation of this law was punished by putting both offenders to death. Otherwise there was complete prenuptial freedom. Cautious fathers shut their daughters up."

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Task for Pianist

Cortot, the celebrated pianist, is fond of a good joke on himself. Cyrano, the Paris periodical, reports this: Dining with friends one night, he was persuaded at the end of the meal to play a rhapsody, which he did with good grace and brilliance. Pale with emotion, a young woman who had been fluttering for a time at her chair suddenly stood up and said: "How divinely you play, maitre, but may I ask you a question?" "Ask it, I beg you." "Is a quaver played quickly?" "Good heavens, I should say it is." "And a semiquaver?" "Much more so." "Oh, maitre," said the lady beseechingly, "do play one for me."

Have to Practice Shooting

The reason Argentines rank among the best shots in the world, as shown in various international rifle contests in past years, is that marksmanship is obligatory upon every male citizen of Argentina between the ages of eighteen and forty-five. This is a part of the Argentine system of compulsory military instruction. Not all citizens have to serve in the army, its ranks being recruited by lot, but those chosen may reduce their one-year term of service by three-fourths if they take the marksmanship course. Those not chosen are obliged to take the course anyway. Statistics recently issued by the ministry of war show that during last year 44,000 citizens took lessons at the 130 rifle ranges in the country, and shot 4,500,000 cartridges.

From Scrubs to Profitable Cows

Scrawny Animals From Arkansas Made Good Producers at Iowa Station.

The efficacy of the "corn-crib cross" has again been demonstrated. The same experiment has demonstrated also the worth of the pure-bred cross. Here is the story: Over in the state of Iowa the experiment station officials decided to go across to the neighboring state of Arkansas, into a section where feed was scarce and what cows they had were poor indeed, and buy a few of them, bring them home, feed them well and breed them to pure-bred bulls. Such an experiment, they reasoned, would demonstrate the value of good feeding to men who had herds of similarly poor cattle and it would show how such herds could be improved from generation to generation. Seven cows, four yearling heifers and two heifer calves were purchased. They were small and undernourished.

Got Same Food.

When they reached their new home, however, they got the same feed and care as the cows in the station herd. Instead of hay in winter and pasture in summer, they were given alfalfa, silage and a well-balanced meal ration. Instead of indifferent housing and hit-and-miss care, they had a good stable and chores were done by the clock. The first year, under this kind of attention, two four-year-olds in the lot produced 3,084.6 lbs. milk and 149.24 lbs. fat. This production they steadily increased until, at seven years of age, they produced an average of 4,907.7 lbs. milk and 229.91 lbs. fat, an increase of 59 per cent in milk and 54 per cent in fat. Allowing for the natural increase due to greater maturity, the increase due to the cumulative effect of good feed and care was 49 per cent in milk and 46 per cent in fat. It was also shown that the younger an animal comes under good feed and management the greater will be its response. Comparing the records of the two four-year-olds with those of the older cows in the lot, they increased 14 per cent in milk and 8 per cent in fat as compared with the mature cows. Those coming as heifers produced 27 per cent more milk and 24 per cent more fat than did those started at maturity. There is a lesson here for the most of us. It is just possible that too much has been said about the importance of good breeding as compared with the emphasis that has been placed on good feeding. We have been in sections where pure-bred bulls have been used for generations, but where the average production of the herds was very low. It was a case of poor feeding. When we consider that these Arkansas cows were as poor as could be found, we must conclude that there would be very few 3,000-pound cows, if all cows were given a real chance.

My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

As Translated Into the English

Sometimes a story takes on added value in the re-telling of it even though the man who repeats it gets it twisted. This doesn't happen often, still it does happen. I recall an instance:

One night at dinner in honor of a distinguished visiting Englishman I was reminded of a yarn which I had from Sam Blythe and when I was called upon by the chairman to speak a few words I told it, and it went very well. It had to do with a prospector in Oklahoma, who, on a Saturday night, bought a quart of moonshine whiskey and took it to his lonely cabin, anticipating a pleasant Sunday. But as he crossed the threshold he stumbled and fell, dropping his precious burden and smashing the bottle, so that its aromatic contents were wasted upon the floor. Depressed by his misfortune, the unfortunate man went to bed. As he lay there bemoaning his loss, a mangy, furtive, half-grown rat with one ear and part of a tail, emerged timorously from a hole in the baseboard, sat up, sniffed the laden air and then, darting swiftly to where the liquor made a puddle in a depression of the planking, ran out its tiny pink tongue, took one quick sip of the stuff and fled in sudden panic to its retreat. But it didn't stay; shortly it again appeared, and now a student of rats would have discerned that a transition had taken place in the spirits of this particular rat. Suddenly it had grown cocky, debonair, almost reckless. It traveled deliberately back to the liquor and imbibed again. Seemingly satisfied it started for home but, changing its mind, it returned and partook a third time of the refreshment. Immediately then its fur stood on end, its eyes burned red, like pigeon-blood rubies, and straightening itself upon its hind legs it waved its forepaws in a gesture of defiance and shrilly cried out: "Now, bring on that dad-blamed cat!"

No one seemed to enjoy my little story more than did the guest of the evening. After the party broke up he made me tell it to him all over again. I could tell from his expression that he was trying to memorize it. In fact, he confessed to me that he expected to use it when he got home as a typical example of American humor.

Six months later I was in London. I attended a dinner. My English friend was the toastmaster. Perhaps my presence recalled to him the anecdote he had so liked. At any rate, he undertook to repeat it.

His version of it ran for perhaps twenty minutes. He entered into a full exposition of the potency of the illicit distillation known among the Yankees, he said, as "shining moon." He went at length into the subject of the habits of rats, pointing out that inasmuch as rats customarily did not indulge in intoxicants a few drops of any liquor carrying high alcoholic content would be likely, for the time being at least, to alter the nature of almost any rat. At length he reached his point. It ran like this:

"And then, this little rodent, being now completely transformed by its repeated potations, reared bolt upright and, voicing the pot-valor of utter intoxication both in tone and manner, it cried out in a voice like thunder:

"I say, I wonder if there isn't a cat about somewhere?"

Dugouts for Dwellings

In Katwyk, a small fishing village on the shore of the North sea, the housing shortage is so intense that many inhabitants are obliged to live in trenches constructed during the World war to defend the Dutch coast against surprise attack. The attention of walkers on the dunes is aroused by chimneys sticking out of the trench tops. In dark, narrow dugouts large families are sometimes quartered. Small tables on which the machine guns were placed in wartime, chairs and field beds are the only furniture. The loopholes have been transformed into windows. Water and light are lacking. Lodgers profit by the curiosity of passers-by by exhibiting their "dens" for a small fee.

KEEPING WELL

WHAT SCHOOLHOUSES NEED

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

THE little red schoolhouse of our grandparents is gone. In its place are handsome brick, stone and frame structures, containing assembly rooms, laboratories, classrooms, gymnasiums, swimming pools and a dozen other luxuries unheard of until recently. How much is necessary and how much is unimportant? What equipment should the simplest and cheaper schools have? What is the very least that the school can provide for the child's health? What are the features in a schoolhouse which are indispensable?

1. Enough window space to admit an abundance of light and fresh air for every pupil. These windows, so far as possible, should be to the left and the rear of each room, so that the light may come over the left shoulder and so that there may be the least possible amount of eyestrain. Each window should have a reflecting screen, set at 70 degrees, so that the air may be admitted and thrown up to the ceiling, without causing a direct draft.

2. A heating plant, whether stove, hot air furnace, steam or hot water, which will furnish enough heat to keep each room at 68 degrees Fahrenheit. A reliable thermometer should be placed in each room.

3. A supply of pure drinking water. If from wells, these should be tubed and protected at the top from surface pollution. The old-fashioned open well, with the bucket and windlass or the chain and bucket pump, are especially dangerous. The force pump is safer provided the top of the well is sealed.

4. Individual drinking cups for each pupil. Common drinking cups have been abolished in railway trains, sleepers, depots, hotels and all other public places. They are more dangerous in a schoolhouse than anywhere else, as in nearly all children's diseases infection is by means of throat and nose discharges.

5. Clean wash bowls, hot water and individual towels and soap, so that the children can keep their hands clean. Dirty hands are a frequent means of infection.

6. Clean, sanitary, fly-tight toilet accommodations.

7. Frequent school inspection by competent physicians, to detect the beginnings of epidemics, protect the healthy children from infection, make necessary physical examinations and advise with the teachers and school authorities as to the health and well-being of the children.

8. Seats which permit the child to do its work in a natural and comfortable attitude.

Has your school these eight essentials? If it hasn't, it is lacking, no matter how imposing the building nor how handsome the decorations.

Landmark to Disappear

The ancient Pietish capital of Scotland, Forteviot, is shortly to disappear, and a new modern village will rise in its place, Lord Forteviot having decided to rebuild the hall, school, and dwelling houses. Perth, overhangs the May water, which flows into the Earn. According to the legend of the foundation of St. Andrews, the king of the Picts built a church at Forteviot (then called Fortevleth), and in his palace there Kenneth MacAlpin died in 860. It was on the "Miller's Acre," near the Halyhill, that Edward Balliol's army encamped before the battle of Dapplin (1332).

Remarkable Fruit

The agricultural explorer is the name given to a scientist who is sent to little-known parts of the world by the United States Department of Agriculture in search of new fruits and plants.

One member of this unique profession has discovered in Ecuador an interesting group of fruits. One of these, the cherimoya, is described as vegetable ice cream, because of its white flesh, which has the consistency of a firm custard. It has the combined flavors of pineapple, strawberry, and banana.

Feats of Strength.

There have recently come to light some extraordinary feats of strength by a Hindoo woman, who is declared by competent observers to be a person of greater physical prowess than the renowned Sandow. The woman in question is Miss Tarabai, born some thirty years ago in a village in Rajputana. One of her remarkable feats is to lie upon the ground and permit a cart laden with men to be drawn across her chest and arms. Suspended between two chairs by her head and feet, Miss Tarabai had a stone weighing a quarter of a ton placed upon her chest, while two men pounded upon it with heavy sledge hammers.

WHITE DIARRHEA.

Save Them

Ashville, Ohio, R. F. D. 1, May 7, 1924.

Mr. Fickardt:—

I bought 400 chicks.

Very soon the chicks began to die of WHITE DIARRHEA. My chicks kept on dying until I had lost 250 in two weeks.

At that time I had ten sick chicks and I really considered them as good as dead. I began to use your remedy with all my chicks, both well and sick. Eight of the sick chicks recovered and I have not lost any others since I began the use of Fickardt's Roup and Cholera Drops over a month ago.

I would have probably thought that the disease had run its course, if it had not been for the fact that those that were sick recovered; but seeing the sick ones get well has convinced me that your remedy cured them.

YESTERDAY'S SOLUTION—

Tomorrow another Cross-word Puzzle will be published along with solution of today's problem.

Control Tomato Blight

by Spraying or Dusting

Tomatoes are very largely injured by leaf spot or blight, which by injuring the leaves prevents the maturity and development of the fruit. They also are likely to be sun scalded because of no protection by the leaves.

This trouble can be controlled to a considerable extent by spraying or dusting with bordeaux, which is profitable on rich soils, but may not be profitable on poor soils. The effects of the trouble can largely be avoided by setting out only stocky, well-hardened plants early in the spring.

The disease lives over in weeds, grass and rubbish of the garden, and therefore, much can be done in the way of prevention by keeping the garden clean. Bulletin No. 1288 of the United States Department of Agriculture gives full details about this disease.

Field Feeding of Corn

Field feeding of corn is most successful when the weather is dry. It is not wise to keep pigs in the field after heavy rains, for they then waste corn and may injure the land. Unless very early varieties of corn are used, which are usually not heavy yielders, the new corn crop will not be ready early enough in the fall to furnish much feed for pigs which are to be finished for market in September or October, before the usual slump in prices occurs.

Cockleburrs Are Fatal

According to A. A. Hansen, weed specialist at Purdue, cockleburs are sometimes fatal to hogs and also to young cattle. It is not known definitely whether the injury is due to poison in the plants or to the mechanical effect of the burs in the digestive system. If the burs are well developed take the hogs from the field but if the plants are not large and the burs soft and just starting to form there is no danger in leaving the hogs where they are.

Air for Tomatoes

Give seedling tomatoes air whenever it is possible to make them stocky. No plant goes spindling faster than the tomato. Open the window a little way on any day when the temperature is above freezing but do not expose to cold winds. Fresh air whenever possible goes a long way toward making fine, strong tomato plants in the seed boxes and frames.

DELEGATIONS WILL MEET AT EL PASO, TEXAS, ON SATURDAY

Hope to Work Out Treaties to Stop Smuggling and Other Problems—Questions of Conspiracy, traffic in Gold, Arms, Ammunition and Narcotics Will Be Taken Up.

An American delegation headed by Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury, left Sunday for El Paso, Texas, where they will meet representatives of the Mexican government May 15 in a conference on border questions. It is the hope of the administration that treaties can be worked out for the cooperative handling of smuggling and other border problems. The American delegation included representatives of four government departments: Mr. Andrews H. S. Colquhoun, in charge of customs at San Francisco and Colonel L. G. Nutt, chief of the narcotic section, for the treasury; William R. Vallance, assistant solicitor for the state department; A. W. Henderson, special assistant to the attorney general and H. R. Gamble, assistant United States attorney at El Paso for the department of justice and assistant Secretary Henning for the department of labor.

Since the negotiations of border treaties with Canada a year ago government agencies at Washington concerned with law enforcement on the borders have been working to establish a similar arrangement with Mexico. Mr. Andrews is optimistic as to the outlook, believing that the Mexican authorities are anxious to join hands with the United States in view of the fact that the law enforcement will be made easier for each government if satisfactory treaties can be made.

The smuggling problem on the Mexican border has been more serious in some respects than that which was taken care of in the Canadian treaties. One of the chief difficulties on the southern line has had to do more with narcotics, with smuggling of aliens a close second, while on the northern border, liquor smuggling required the greatest attention. For this reason, customs officers and officials of the labor department and the narcotic problems of Commissioner Haynes, prohibition forces will be more important factors in the forthcoming conference, than in the meeting with the Canadian representatives.

Liquor running has been increasing lately along the main border, however and Mr. Andrews will seek closer cooperation among the various government agencies having to do with law enforcement there to cut down this traffic. He has had several conferences with other government departments on this phase of the work, but date nothing tangible has developed.

Mr. Andrews said he would press for understandings with Mexico looking to joint action by the two governments in suppressing all kinds of smuggling operations; exchange of information between the two nations with regard to international conspiracies and extradition of persons violating the narcotic laws of either government. Questions of traffic in gold, arms and ammunition also will be taken up, but officials at Washington were unwilling to discuss these features.

Columbus, May 9—Samuel R. Boggs Philadelphia, national president of the Gideons, attacked Warden P. E. Thomas of the Ohio penitentiary for giving address the men at Ohio pen on Mothers' Day. HAMPP FAMILY PICTURED IN THE NON-SKID

In its issue of May 6, "The Firestone Non-Skid," a paper printed by the Firestone Tire and Rubber company of Akron, had the picture of Mrs. Sarah Hampp, of this city, her son, William E. Hampp and his two boys, Paul and Joseph.

Accompanying the pictures was the following article complimentary to the family and pleasing to their many friends in Old Roundtown:

"Three finer representatives of original Buckeye settlers than the Hampp family would be hard to find at Firestone and they all work at steel products.

"William E. Hampp, the father, is foreman of accessory inspecting and has been at the Rim plant for more than eight years. He is well known for his interest in the Kenmore Home and School League. The family home is in Circleville where 'Grandma' Hampp has recently been seriously ill.

"Paul Hampp, the older son, also in the inspecting department, is one of the Akron university students working at Firestone on the cooperation plan. Paul is a member of the University Debating club and is president of the C. E. society of the Kenmore Reformed church.

"Joe Hampp is employed at the Rim plant on locking rims. He is already quite a hunter and fisherman having a number of fine trophies to show as evidence of his ability as a sportsman."

SHOULD DIM AUTO LIGHTS AS DIRECTED

Failure to Observe Law is Responsible for Many Fatalities and Injuries.

No one factor at night is responsible for more motor fatalities and injuries than the glaring headlights. Thursday night four Cincinnati firemen rushing to a duty which in itself is supremely dangerous, were catapulted over a high embankment because a criminally negligent motorist failed to dim his lights. Three were injured seriously. Only by a mere miracle did they escape death.

There is a law on the statute books of the state of Ohio decreeing that automobile lights shall be dimmed when approaching and passing another vehicle. The law is on the book—but not on the highway. More than half the motorists met in night driving on city streets or rural roads, flagrantly disregard this law. Wrecks, death and injury result. The motor car driver responsible for such fatalities is no less guilty of manslaughter than he who in any other manner kills without premeditation or when breaking a law.

The dimming law, state and city, should be enforced to the limit. But that is not enough. It is impossible for any force of police or constabulary to check up on the thousands of cars on the highway. The motor car operator must consider himself personally responsible for the safety of the road. Dim those lights! Perhaps by so doing you may save a life. Driving of an automobile should be marked by at least half as much courtesy and consideration as one shows at other moments. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

PRESIDENT ADDRESSES CONFERENCE

Voice of Nation is For Liberty, Order and Sacredness of Human Rights.

President Coolidge, opening the national oratorical contest with an address at Washington, declared that the United States has "a weighty responsibility not only for maintaining its own welfare, liberties and power, but for the utmost possible contribution toward organizing the nations and peoples in the aspirations and ways of peace."

"Here is a field for institutional development to which the thoughts of men and women everywhere are turned as they never were before," he continued. "The their scale is greater yet the problems in this realm of world organizations are essentially the same as these to which mankind has been addressing itself from the beginning of society."

"These are the problems of assuring justice alike to the weak and the strong, of assuring peace with honor, of enthroning conscience in places of authority too long usurped by mere force. The same humanity that has been able to erect the rule of law and liberty on the scale of great nations and mighty federations will at last find institutions by which to place international relations upon the same sure foundations."

Recalling that he had given an address when a similar contest was conducted at Washington a year ago, the president reminded his hearers that he had observed then that "there never was a time when our institutions were so universally being subjected to intimate scrutiny and close consideration as they are today."

"I urged the special importance of closely studying our institutions in order that the people might be equipped intelligently to defend them. Since that suggestion was advanced we have literally taken a national referendum on the subject of our constitutional system, and I am glad to be able to report that the verdict was overwhelmingly in favor of sustaining that system and going on to perfect it."

"The voice of the nation has been heard. It spoke with emphasis that none could possibly misunderstand. It declared for ordered liberty, for constitutional procedures, for the maintained sanctity of the courts, the rule of law, the security of property and the sacredness of human rights."

Mr. Coolidge said he had been amazed to learn that the seven school children in the finals were the survivors in a nation wide competition in which the number of boys and girls taking part had reached the total of 1,400,000. Referring to the subject of the orations, the Federal Constitution, he added:

"Turning our eyes to the future who can doubt that these studies of the underlying elements in our government constitute a pledge of security for those institutions in all the years to come?"

"Banking" System Old
The Roman emperors lent money upon land. The lending of money on the security of movable articles, which were said to be pledged, became common in European countries during the Fifteenth century. Out of this grew the system known as pawnbroking, which was specially regulated in England in 1756, and 27 years later the business of pawnbroking was licensed.

NOT NUGGET BUT ONION STARTED FIRST GOLD RUSH

Finding of Bit of Ore on Plant Responsible for Stories Which Sent Crowds to California.

Los Angeles.—Recent reports that the original first nugget of California gold was in the possession of a private collector in New York have aroused chroniclers of Southern California's history to remind the public that it was an onion, not Sutter's mill, that started the first California gold rush.

Moreover, these chroniclers relate, that onion grew in the San Fernando valley northwest of here, hundreds of miles south of Sutter's mill, and the gold rush it started began in 1841, seven years before James Marshall's discovery of gold in El Dorado county.

It was on March 9, 1841, that Francisco Lopez was riding through San Feliciano canyon with a companion and stopped to eat lunch under a tree. Lopez liked onions, and when he saw a wild one growing within arm's reach he leaned over to dig it up with his knife and add it to his meal. Clinging to the roots of that onion were several small pieces of gold.

Soon the rush was on. As far north as Santa Barbara and as far south as San Diego the news of the gold strike spread. In a few weeks hundreds of men were sifting the sands of the canyon for gold, and some were finding it in profitable quantities.

Hostilities between the United States and Mexico interrupted the placer mining, and when, in 1855, mining activities were resumed in the San Fernando field, the later but greater gold rush started by the discovery of nuggets at Sutter's mill in the North was in full swing.

Estimates of the amount of gold taken out at the San Fernando placers vary widely, but such data as are available indicate that more than $5,000,000 in placer gold has been shipped out of Los Angeles county since Lopez's onion revealed the existence of the metal here.

Nevada Aims to Own Ruins Recently Found

Reno, Nev.—The recently discovered ancient cliff dweller city, sometimes referred to as Pueblo Grande de Nevada, located along the banks of the Virgin river in southern Nevada, is largely on federal land, and, in the opinion of Gov. James Shreve, should become the property of the state.

Two or more thousands of years ago, exploration has developed, people, thought to be the ancestors of the Pueblo Indians of today, established the city, which, after reaching a high stage of development, was allowed to go to ruin, and in time became buried under sand and debris so that hardly a trace of it remained until recent discoveries.

What is believed an irrigation system has been found, and from this it is presumed the city's inhabitants were agriculturists and made the desert bloom in much the same manner as it does today in certain sections of the West.

Archaeological investigation is expected to go forward rapidly this summer. Many mummies and much pottery from the ruins are now being studied.

Eskimo Girls Go Home After Schooling Abroad

Los Angeles, Cal.—The spell of the arctic has proved stronger than 5,000 years of civilization to two little Eskimo girls who came here aboard the Danish motorship Tongking, bound back to their home up under the North pole after four years of European schooling.

Four years ago Capt. Roald Amundsen, arctic explorer and discoverer of the South pole, reached East cape, Siberia, after traversing the Northwest passage by way of Greenland. From East cape, the most westerly point of Eurasia and only a few hundred miles from the North pole, he took back to Denmark with him, Kamilla Carpendale, eleven years old, and Kakonita Kakot, seven. They were to be educated in the best schools in Europe and after that, if they chose, return to their arctic home.

Kamilla is the daughter of Charles Carpendale, an Australian adventurer who married an Eskimo girl and living on East cape, while Kakonita is a full-blooded Eskimo lass—with the features of the typical arctic dweller.

Discover Crater Lake in Alaskan Volcano

Seward, Alaska.—W. R. Smith and Sidney Old, old-time Alaskans, in traversing the headwaters of the Aniakchak river recently, discovered a volcano of scientific interest about thirty miles west of Aniakchak bay, on the southern side of the Alaska peninsula. The crater was named Aniakchak after the river rising within its walls.

The crater is similar in size and shape to that of Crater lake in Oregon, but differs in having a comparatively small body of water on its floor. The rim is circular in outline and has a diameter of six miles.

A mountain summit that forms the range is from 1,000 to 1,500 feet above the bottom of the crater, and is unbroken except for a gorge from which the river flows.

Within the crater one cinder cone rises 1,000 feet above the general level of the floor, and there are a number of smaller cones.

Polka Dots and Coin Spots in Limelight

Dots and spots, polka dots and coin spots are to deluge us this season like an April shower. They range in size from pinheads to large harlequins, and of course appear in all the long range of colors used in fabrics, in graduated sizes and in graded tones and shades they form the borders for plain garments.

Dots fall into raindrops, expressed into stripes worked out in harmonious colors. Dots also appear in squares of various sizes, and they outline buds, blossoms and flowers, and they appear in scrolls as well.

Dots and stripes are the most primitive designs known to man. It remains for the modern designers to bring them up to date, and this they have done by developing them into borders, and into such a variety of sizes and colors as to surpass any previous move in the history of the textile industry.

There is an appealing little romance in the history of the ubiquitous polka dot. In the year 1830, Anna Slezak a farm girl living near Prague in Bohemia, originated a dance. It is recorded that the room in which she practiced her new dance was so small that of a necessity her steps were very short, or only half-steps. So she called it "Pulka," for pulka is the word in her Bohemian tongue that meant half. The craze for this dance swept the civilized world, much as jazz has taken possession of the contemporary mind. At the height of its fashion, the name was given to a new dress goods pattern. Of course, the word had been Anglicized to "polka," and from that day to this, a small dotted design has been known as the polka-dot.

Sisters to the polka-dot are the pin dot and the coin-spot, the former being smaller and the latter larger.

Kerchief Latest Fancy for Neck and Shoulders

The kerchief is the latest idea illustrating the fancy for an ornamental bit of softness to drape about the neck and shoulders. It consists of a square of silk or crepe the size of a small shawl, and its pattern is that of Rumanian, or whatsoever. Or it may be printed in gay colors more or less primitive in the drawing, Spanish, Russian, Rumanian. Or it may be hand painted or embroidered in whatever design is preferred. The bold, richly colored designs of the folkcraft of central Europe, the peasant needlework, prim and sober, the batik and ultra modern are pictured with the rarest dyes on backgrounds of white, black or any one of many brilliant or delicate shades.

The pattern is always elaborate, covering the corners in large space, and sometimes a border all around the kerchief. The glory of this scarf is a fringe, 15 to 18 inches deep, made of heavy silk floss, knotted by hand. The manner of wearing these kerchiefs is quaintly pretty, for women draw them close about their shoulders over a decollete or sheer evening gown. They give an impression that is somewhat that of a gypsy—somewhat that of a lady of formal ways.

Spring Skirts

Plaits are a feature in spring skirts. No rule governs their placing except that they are not to go evenly all the way round. There may be an inverted plait or two inverted at the center front, panel style, or a group of fine plaits at the front or one side, or both sides, or just a few box or side plaits at the side, stitched to within a few inches of the bottom. Where a belt is given with the skirt it is a wide one after the style of the belts on the sports dresses.

STATUES OF LAVA ON EASTER ISLAND

Modern Scientists at Loss to Account for Cult.

Easter Island, in the South Pacific, which recently was reported to have vanished in a submarine convulsion, still waves its fringed palms in air. Capt. Alfred Kling sends to Illustrierte Zeitung, Berlin, an account of some of its peculiarities.

"In former times," the captain writes, "the tribes and clans on the island lived in constant warfare with each other. The captives were eaten. Many human bones still lie about in the caves of the island. The original Kanakas had a very queer cult, for which they built gigantic statues of lava. The biggest of these statues is that of the thunder god. It is twenty-one meters long and seven meters wide and weighs twenty tons. Whether these stone monuments were idols or the statues of famous island personalities cannot be ascertained.

"Some of the monuments carry a mysterious hieroglyphic script. There are about 555 of these giants, the tokens of former civilization. In 1893 the island was discovered by Peru slave dealers, who caught the majority of the Kanakas and took them by force to the Peruvian guano islands, where they died of epidemics.

"The island people own wild chickens and pigs. The chickens fly like pheasants and stay at night in the trees. The owners identify their chickens by cuts on the toes. Wildcats are the only game on Easter Island. Day-time is determined by the position of the sun. Tobacco plants grow on the island. The natives use banana leaves as cigarette paper; they always carry a provision of banana leaves at their belt.

"I could never quite find out how marital conditions were on the island. It seemed to me that marriage among members of the same household was prohibited. A violation of this law was punished by putting both offenders to death. Otherwise there was complete prenuptial freedom. Cautious fathers shut their daughters up."

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. SCIENCE REVEALS

The Secret of a "Broken Heart"
—Also the Cure.

Death, "from a broken heart" is no myth, and it "doesn't just happen," according to James W. Barton, M. D., medical director of the Canadian Health Service Institute. Writing in this week's "broken hearts" from grief is a distinct ailment, and that it attacks particularly all who attempt to repress their grief, or "bear it without whimpering."

"An emotion is a tax upon the system, and fatigue follows the use of the nerves, just as it follows the use of the muscles," he says. "If, added to this, there is the tremendous effort on the part of the will to control the emotion, then the nervous system is under double strain."

"The fatigue products created by this double strain damage the nerve cells, and a serious degenerative change occurs. The man or woman who dies of a 'broken heart' due to pent-up grief, dies because these fatigue products actually damaged the nervous system, and thus various organs of the body. It is called nervous exhaustion."

"The emotions must be experienced but don't put on the double strain on the nervous mechanism must, perforce, lower your vitality because of this constant strain on your brain. So if you must control all emotions in the presence of others, let loose when you can get by yourself."

"Your vitality is your most valuable asset. Don't wear it out by trying to be a sphinx at all times."

YOUTH, 20, WHO NEVER WALKED
NOW HAS HOPE

Believes Surgeons Will Accomplish Miracle He Has Dreamed of.

Kansas City, Mo.—Gerald Wilson, twenty, of Gilman, Iowa, never has walked.

In six months, surgeons at the Christian Church hospital say, Gerald will try his legs. They believe he will be able to use them.

Recently he underwent an operation on one leg. The other leg just went under the knife.

Gerald faces six months, possibly eight, in the hospital. He's happy. He believes the surgeons who have operated on him will accomplish the miracle he has dreamed of through the long 15 years he has lain bedfast.

Eager to Get Well.

Back of Gerald's smile and his fortitude is a desire to get well and repay citizens of Gilman whose generosity made possible the hope for future usefulness.

Dave Manville and Charles Otto Hagerty, Gilman business men, pledged $1,000 to defray Gerald's hospital bill. They now are planning a benefit show in Gilman to raise an additional $500 to do the job up right.

Until a few months ago, Gerald had resigned himself to the life of an invalid. There was no hope, he felt of his ever walking. From his bedroom windows he had watched boys of his age cavort. He had turned away his head many times to keep from sobbing.

Surgeon Proves "Angel."

His parents were poor. He had no money. Then a Kansas City surgeon, who has remained anonymous throughout the case, told him an operation would make his legs straight. The surgeon told Gerald a birth injury had caused a hemorrhage of the brain, which in turn caused the muscles of his legs to contract. The surgeon, volunteered his services gratis.

Manville and Hagerty raised the money for the hospital bill and Gerald was trundled into the Christian Church hospital.

"I'm going to walk out," says Gerald.

Chicago Brides Found for Farmers in West Canada

Ottawa.—Chicago, New York and Montana having been heard from, it will not be necessary to send a special mission to England and Ireland to get wives for Canadian farmers in the Northwest. This was arranged for, but a deluge of letters came from American women willing to pass their lives in the Northwest.

"Vilna bachelors," said a dispatch from Vilna, Alberta, Canada, "will not need to search England and Ireland for brides. More than 100 letters have been received by the secretary of the Vilna Citizens' league from lonely maids in Canada and the United States, asking particulars about the 63 bachelor farmers of this district and giving encouragement to the most bashful to propose at once."

The greater part of the writers hail from Toronto and other Ontario ports Montana and British Columbia also are well represented. Chicago and New York furnished about a score each.

So appointment of the overseas envoy was canceled at the last meeting of the league, and a scheme of advertising for Canadian and American girls adopted.

Chair Decapitates Driver of Auto in Wagon Crash

New York.—In one of the most unusual automobile accidents ever recorded, William Purcell, Elmhurst Queens, was killed early by a kitchen chair, which crashed through the windshield of his car.

Purcell collided with a horse-drawn milk wagon of the Sheffield Farms company, at the approach to Flushing bridge, Corona, killing the horse and demolishing the wagon. William Price the driver, had been sitting on a chair in the wagon.

Hurled through the windshield, the chair struck Purcell in the neck and nearly tore his head from his shoulders. He died on the way to Flushing hospital.

HOOKED RUGS
MADE READY FOR SPRING

Modern Patterns Fit Into the Decorative Scheme of New Furniture.

In our grandmothers' days the interior decorator was not yet abroad in the land. That is, not the interior decorator that we know, very wise and efficient in the realm of colors, fabrics and period furniture. We are beginning to realize dimly now that in those days every woman, every housekeeper, was her own interior decorator, with a deep knowledge, a practical, working knowledge of how to beautify her home, of how to do it simply and tastefully with the oftentimes inadequate materials at her disposal.

It has become quite the fashion to laugh at the old-fashioned "parlors," with their funeral wreaths, their crowded whatnots, their enlarged crayon drawings, on unwieldy easels of some dear departed, but the fact remains that interior decorators today the wisest of them, are not ashamed to copy many useful and beautiful things from these same homes that maintained "parlors," and to grant to the woman of yesterday a knowledge they are glad to adapt to the needs and standards of today's household decoration. Take, for example, hooked rugs.

The words themselves—Simple, homely words as they are, give no suggestion of the real color and romance that these useful articles represented in the lives of our hard working ancestors.

Rugs, or mats as they were more commonly called in the country, were usually hooked in the winter and were ready to put down after the spring housecleaning. For months before every stray bit of cloth, all the bright colored bits of material left over after a session with the village dressmaker, were cut in narrow strips and stuffed in convenient "rag bags" usually kept in the attic. Into these rugs, then, in intricate patterns, were hooked bits of Cousin Emma's wedding dress; scraps of the ever useful red flannel petticoat, one of which was owned by every well-dressed woman; bits of baby's first, out-door wrap; scraps from the bright green merino that sister wore to her first grown-up party, even brother's red muffler appeared again in the pattern of the rug. And it was a lucky woman who could have one of all yarn or part yarn.

Women nowadays, having taken wholeheartedly to hooked rugs are making them out of bright colored yarns, because it is easier to work with, because the colors are softer and blend better in a design and also perhaps because they no longer have "rag-bags" and no attics in which to store them. Although they have improved upon the materials somewhat, the modern method is also improved upon. Instead of hooking being a tedious task, it is today, thanks to a new needle, just one punch after another.

Many of the old designs are well worth copying. There was the favorite basket of flowers of all colors in the center of the rug, with a neutral background. That is always good, and some of the oldest hooked rugs for sale today bring the highest prices because of the beauty of this design. Modern women are copying these, finding that the yarn they use in hooking, with its beautiful and varied shades lends itself well to a pattern of this sort. Everyone knows the faithful dog pattern, such a favorite with old-fashioned families, and women today are designing, in yarn, this huge, shaggy canine with red tongue hanging realistically from a fiercely opened mouth.

Up-to-date women are not contented, however, with the old patterns only. They want hooked rugs—but hooked rugs in modern patterns to fit into the decorative scheme of modern furniture, chintzes, painted rooms and even the futuristic designs. Modern patterns come already stenciled on burlap with the color scheme indicated. The burlap comes in various sizes and can be bought at many of the yarn shops.

Knit Your Own and Save Money.

The vogue for costumes of such casual chic and so becoming in their utter simplicity and their suggestion of youth has brought about a vogue for the hand knitted frock, slipon, or two piece costume. Paris and London were first in launching these new fashions and the cost of the individual models was almost prohibitive.

But for once fashion has been kind to the woman of limited dress allowance. Given a pair of knitting needles, yarn in any of the fashionable colors and a book of directions, so clearly explained that even a beginner can follow them, and every woman has within her reach any number of different costumes that are not only essentially smart and in perfect taste, but are remarkably practical.

Hand knitted garments fashioned of the finest yarns may be cleaned again and again and their wearing qualities are well known. One must be sure to buy yarns of fast colors.

Shark God Once Favorite Fiji Deity.

Among the Fijians in former times the favorite deity of the boatmen and fishermen, and one greatly feared by them, was the shark god. His name was Daquwaqa (pronounced Dake-wonga). This deity was greatly feared and it was believed by all seafarers that to adventure into his domain without making sacrifice was extremely foolhardy and in defiance of faith. His favorite sacrifice to the Fijian god was a drink of yanggona root—the kava of Fijians. Native mythology is naturally full of tales relating to the ferocity of Dakuwaqa, who is usually described not in the form of a shark, as might be supposed, but rather in the shape of a huge jew fish or angel fish.

AMUSEMENTS

"Salome of the Tenements," produced by Sidney Olcott for Paramount from the novel by Anzia Yezierska, who wrote "Hungry Hearts" and other just as successful stories, comes to the Met on Monday for two days.

Jetta Goudal, French beauty seen in "Open All Night," Godfrey Tearle, Conway's brother, and Jose Ruben are featured in the cast.

The story is one of Sonya Mendel, nicknamed Salome of New York's tenement district. She meets and falls in love with a young millionaire who has established a settlement house in her neighborhood and has sacrificed a comfortable home and social position to live there and help brighten the lives of the inhabitants of Manhattan's ghetto district.

Sonya borrows money from an unscrupulous usurer to make an impression on her philanthropic friend and by so doing almost ruins her chances for happiness—and love.

"Salome of the Tenements" is a picture with an appeal not unlike that of "Humoresque." It's real!

MAN COMES HOME
AFTER BODY WAS BURIED AS HIS

Corpse Claimed as Father and Husband Proves
That of Woman.

New Orleans.—The family of Frank Muller, Sr., reported to the police recently that they were mourning his death after having buried what they thought was his body, when he walked into his home, and hardly had that mystery been settled when the corner announced that a body recovered from the Mississippi river and identified by one man as his father and by a wife as her husband was really that of a woman.

Frank Muller, Sr., a man of fifty-six years, had been separated from his wife for some five years, and when the body of a man about his age and bearing papers with the name "Frank Miller" was discovered in a gas-filled room, Muller's son and wife identified it and gave it burial.

Read of His Funeral.

Muller read of the funeral in the newspapers and went home to tell the family he was still alive. The mystery of "Frank Miller's" identity remains unsolved, except that the rooming-house keeper said she heard him say he was from California.

The other body, which apparently had been in the water for months, was found floating in the river here, and Charles W. Burdette, Jr., whose father, according to police records, jumped into the river here May 27, 1924, identified it by a belt buckle and false teeth.

Body That of Woman.

Mrs. John Fisher visited the morgue later in the day and said it was the body of her husband, who disappeared January 28 last.

Then Dr. E. J. de Bergeau, assistant coroner and a physician for an insurance company, decided to investigate and discovered the remains were those of a woman. Police have no record of any woman disappearing here.

Cult Priestess Jailed
for Burning Sacrifice

Kitchener, Ont.—Anna Reynolds, reputed priestess of a cult known as "the faith of the holy light," was taken into custody charged with having presided over a weird midnight ceremonial at Bluevale, Ont., in which ten hogs were sacrificed as "an offering to devilish spirits."

Constable P. C. Whiteside arrested her on the charge that she was "insane and dangerous to be at large." Earl Underwood, who furnished the hogs and who told authorities he "would do anything Anna Reynolds said to do," was held for questioning. The woman, a professional nurse, came from Toronto to the Underwood farm to attend Mrs. Underwood during an illness. Underwood's story is that she ordered him to build a great pyre of logs. Then she ordered that ten of the farmer's choicest hogs be trussed upon the pyre. At midnight the priestess ignited the pyre and as the blaze mounted she made queer gestures and uttered strange incantations.

Napping Caddy's Head
Used as Golf Tee

Pensacola, Fla.—Use of his head as a tee sent Johnnie Gates, fifteen-year-old negro caddy at the Pensacola Country club, to the hospital with a fractured skull.

Play was dull on the course and Johnnie was taking a nap. A fellow caddy, lugging golf sticks, placed a ball on his head and after taking a couple of healthy swings, drove. He missed the ball.

Doctors despaired of saving Johnnie's life.

Sleeps in Pool

Salt Lake City.—The police found K. N. Jensen, sixty, naked and asleep, floating around in a four-foot deep pool of natural warm sulphur water in a cave just north of Salt Lake City. A wooden pillow arrangement was used by Jensen to keep his head afloat. He told the police that he had spent his nights for months in the pool because it afforded relief from the cold weather.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

A number of relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Abe LaMaster on East Franklin street Sunday each bringing a well filled basket and had a sumptuous dinner prepared when Mrs. LaMaster returned home from Mothers' Day church service. Mr. LaMaster and spirit of the occasion and the brother, Alanson, formerly of Kingston, Indiana, was among the callers and came as a surprise to all. He will make his future home in Columbus, Ohio, with his daughter, Mrs. Anna Ogle, on Miller avenue. HOG PRICES

This Year Have Been Steadily
On the Upgrade.

The trend of hog prices this year have been steadily to a higher level. In March, the latest month in which complete figures are available, the purchasing power of hogs at the farm, expressed in terms of the commodities it would buy, was virtually on a pre-war basis. At the time, the purchasing power of hogs, expressed in terms of corn, was considerably higher than it had been for months, making it profitable for producers to feed corn. Thus the ability of the farmer to buy clothes, motor cars, chewing gum and whatnot is measurably increased.

Basing their graphs on figures obtained from the Department of Labor and the Department of Agriculture, Armour's Live Stock Bureau has prepared a chart, using as a base, the average pre-war purchasing power of 1910 to 1914, and establishing it as 100.

That chart shows that March, 1924, the purchasing power of hogs, in the terms of all commodities, was 58, and the purchasing power in terms of corn was 70.

The upward trend continued its swing to March, 1925, when the purchase power of hogs, expressed in all commodities, was 98, and in terms of corn, 86.

It is particularly interesting to note that receipts of hogs in February, 1925, were 39 points higher than the pre-war volume, and in March, 1925, only 4 points higher than pre-war volume.

April figures, undoubtedly, will show some change in the immediate situation when they become available, for this is a season of the year when hogs begin to come to market in more abundant quantities.

Hogs have been moving down in price, but so has corn, nevertheless it would seem quite safe to say that the trend of hogs now is such as to warrant the belief that they have reached a level which will put them on a nearly equitable basis with the things that the farmer must buy.

Neglect of Punctuality
Often Source of Strife

Perhaps one-third of the unpleasantness that occur between husbands and wives come from not keeping appointments promptly and accurately. One of the easiest things in the world to do is to get mixed up about the place or the hour set for meeting in the heart of a city. Haven't you often seen a woman with knitted forehead standing in a shop vestibule half an hour at a time peering this way and that to look for the friend who never comes? Or an impatient husband walking up and down a hotel foyer, watch in hand, getting wrathier every minute?

In the first place, do not be indefinite about the place, the Kansas City Star enjoins. Don't say: "I'll be at the Main street entrance of Blank & Co.'s" when Blank & Co. have several entrances and you may be thinking of the Broadway entrance when you say Main street. You will go to the Broadway door and your friend will go to the Main street door, and just as you decide that she may be at the other entrance she decides that you are probably at the other door, and you miss each other in passing. An entrance is a poor place to meet, anyway; better go a little farther and set an absolutely unmistakable place, such as a small specialty shop, candy store or one-door shoe store.

If possible, always meet your husband in the same place. Set a convenient, comfortable central building, with chairs to be had, and always go to that same place unless there is some good reason not to. Early in your married life pick out your favorite rendezvous and go there in general, though sometimes it may be best to set some other place. If you change or meet in some strange city be very explicit; and when you have set a place, go there and stay there. Don't move about and try some other stand. Last of all, be prompt. Give up some of your errands, break away from friends or the matinee, cut short a concert—but be there when you say you will unless your train breaks down or you are knocked down by an automobile. The greatest compliment any husband, wife or friend can give is to say:

"He (or she) will be there on time, if it is a possible thing."

His Letter of Recommendation

By GORTON CARRUTH

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

TO THE young man on the curb gazing across the street at the imposing pile of the Davenport Publishing company's building, that structure of steel and stone looked like a mountain. But perhaps Waldron's impression was colored a little by the fact that he was about to cross the street, ascend to the glacial top of the mountain and strike old Archibald P. Davenport.

When finally, in a burst of resolution, Waldron struck across the street, braved an impudent office boy and was presently admitted to the sanctum of the great Archibald P. Davenport himself, he found that crusty old potentate in an unusually bilious humor.

"Well, young man," he said, "what do you want?"

"Why—ah—you see, Mr. Davenport," stammered Waldron, "I have come to you as an old friend of my father's, Horace Waldron. I—"

"I knew Horace Waldron—slightly—thirty years ago," interrupted Davenport, "but I don't know you."

"I have a job open to me," answered the young man, "if I can offer a satisfactory reference. So I have come to you, thinking that as my father's old friend you might be kind enough to give me a recommendation."

"So you want a letter of recommendation, do you?" he inquired, after a moment in a voice almost too smooth. "Well—all right." He pressed a button and a stenographer came in. "You sit down outside for a minute, young man, and I'll send it out to you. Good day."

It was with a feeling of considerable confidence that, half an hour later, Waldron presented himself and his letter of recommendation to Ambrose Hare, head of the Hare Button Manufacturing company.

"Ah," he said, "from Archibald P. Davenport. He adjusted his glasses. He read. His lips pursed, his brow wrinkled, his head began to shake. "Ah . . . have you read this letter, young man?"

"Why, no. It was given me in a sealed envelope."

"Ah, yes, yes. Of course. Well, you see, it's hardly just the thing. No, not quite the thing. Ah . . . really, you know, I'm afraid that it doesn't recommend you highly for the position here."

Astonished and chagrined, Waldron stood up. "May I see the letter?" he asked quietly.

"Ah . . . no objection to that, I'm sure. Here it is."

Waldron turned and walked out, and as he went he read the letter of recommendation that was to have obtained him the job.

"To whom it may concern," it began. "The bearer of this letter, a Mr. Waldron, though a total stranger to me, has presumed upon a slight acquaintance that I had with his father thirty years ago to ask me for a letter of recommendation. I have never seen him before today, but I can conscientiously say that he ought to make good in any position requiring a self-confidence that I am tempted to call gall. Sincerely, Archibald P. Davenport."

Stunned and crushed, the young man wandered blindly through the streets until he came to a little park. He found a vacant place on a bench and sat down feeling tired and weak. Then, a moment later, he laughed.

"Well, old boy," he muttered to himself, "that was a good joke, wasn't it? Yes, great."

Amid the shifting crowd of people that passed before his eyes appeared a jaunty schoolgirl with a bundle of books under her arm. The young man's eyes fell upon her mechanically. At the same time his fingers, thrust into his coat pocket, touched the written specimen of Archibald P. Davenport's humor.

Passers-by were startled to see the sober-looking youth on the bench suddenly burst into laughter, leap up and start briskly away at almost a run. He headed directly for the Davenport Publishing company's building and when he reached that forbidding looking structure he passed inside as though he owned it. He inquired his way with easy confidence, and he soon stood before the railing that shut visitors away from a bustling floor of busy laborers in the vineyard of literature.

"Mr. Wilson, please," he said decisively to the girl who advanced to meet him.

"Ah, Mr. Wilson," he greeted that individual a moment later. "I understand that you are head of the sales department?"

"I am."

"I am looking for a job as a salesman," said Waldron, "a book salesman. Or should I say book agent? Anyhow, I feel that I am well qualified for the job by education and by nature. As to the latter I have the best of recommendations. Just read this letter, please."

Numbly Wilson took the proffered letter and read it. As he finished he grinned broadly. He swung open the gate in the railing.

"Come in, Mr. Waldron," he said. "We do need a new man and I should judge that you have the fundamental qualities necessary in this branch of the book publishing business. I should not question Mr. Davenport's judgment on that point. Come in!"

DELHI COLONY IN DEEP
DISTRESS IN CALIFORNIA

State Land Settlement People in Great Need—Ask Legislative Assistance.

Delhi Colony, Calif.—California's second state land settlement, the Delhi colony, has resulted in a band of disheartened farmers, who place their only hope in remedial legislation affecting payment on their places and an appropriation of $250,000 to make necessary improvements.

The colonists, who settled from middle western and eastern states under a plan sponsored and indorsed by the state through its land settlement board, headed by Dr. Elwood Mead, father of the land colonization plan in the United States, laid their story of hardship and disaster before a legislative committee. Already 48 settlers have abandoned their farms.

Claiming to be victims of mismanagement and of pyramided costs, settlers laid the account of their years of effort before the committee and pleaded for help to save their farms and homes.

The committee came here, obtained a general impression of the colony plan from Capt. J. Winter Smith, its superintendent, and then left for a tour of the colony by automobile.

On their tour the committee for the first time came into direct touch with the settlers and individuals. They met Charlie Stoop, a smiling, hard-working young man of thirty-four, who came to Delhi with $3,300 in cash and invested it because he "loved to farm." Charlie has a $3,200 mortgage on his 40 acres, although he has worked since 1920. He pays interest amounting to $65 a month.

Smiling as he told his story to the members of the state legislature, Charlie declares that "this raw sand makes you hump," and added that "sometimes the wife and I don't know whether we'll get over the hill."

Stoop was an Iowa farmer who made money farming in that state. He also is an expert sign painter, but he prefers to found a farm home in California if he can. His standard of living, he admitted, was low. He has been able to furnish only one room of his home, and has kept grocery bills as low as $7 in some months.

To Save a Soul Was
Sandy's Idea

By JOHN PALMER

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"WHO might you be?"

Sandy McGregor stood in the doorway of his shack, looking keenly down at the trembling boy within. Tall, grizzled, the epitome of strength was Sandy, the occupant of the lonely shack in the desert, twenty miles from Sunrise.

For two years he had been doggedly washing gold from the stream, always in hope of the great strike which he had never made.

Every one in Sunrise respected the gaunt, God-fearing old Scotchman, whose word was his bond.

Sandy looked at the boy. "Ye be Alex Smith?"

"Yes, I'm Alex Smith," faltered the other. "Yoa know about me. I shot and killed John Templeton. He cheated me out of my wages and discharged me from his livery stable."

"Aye, I know about that crime," answered Sandy.

"I didn't mean to shoot him. I'd been trying out a gun and I—I lost my head. I pulled it and fired. He fell dead. I've been hiding for a week. Won't you protect me till the posse thinks I've got away?"

"I'll protect ye," answered Sandy. He let the boy bunk in his cabin, and took him into the hills with him the next day, where he would be safe from visitors. He made him up a bunk in the little shack he had erected in the gully. No one would come that way.

Days passed. Alex worked with a will for his employer. At the end of a week he went to him.

"I guess the posse's given up the job," he said. "I'd better be hiking."

"Whaur d'you think of going?" asked Sandy.

"Over the hills. I can strike the railroad in four days, hop a freight and—"

"And live all your days with the charge of murder hanging over ye, a hunted fugitive?" asked Sandy. "Man, go down on your knees and ask Him to give ye the strength to go back and take your medicine!"

"Back to Sunrise?" whimpered Alex. "You—you're not going to give me up?"

"I'm not going to give ye up, but I want ye to give yersel' up, Alex. A man reaps whaur he sows. 'Tis the law. Give yersel' up and trust to His mercies."

"I daren't," whimpered the boy. "They'll hang me."

"On yer knees!" said Sandy. He knelt beside him. "O Lord," he prayed, "as thou hast given strength to the desert and the everlastin' hills, give strength now to this thy servant that he may do what is right and surrender himself to the sheriff."

Then ensued a dogged battle between the old man and the boy. For two days they fought it out together.

"If you go, you'll have yer life and freedom," said Sandy. "But ye'll live yer life knowing you've committed the sin of murder. Ye'll never know that peace of the soul that comes from well doin'. Give yersel' up and trust in Him."

In the middle of the third night Alex slipped quietly from his bunk, gathered his few things together, and crept out of the hut. He glanced fearfully at big Sandy as he passed his bed. He did not see that the big Scot was observing him through his half-closed lids.

When he was gone, Sandy went down on his knees and prayed that strength might be given to the lad. He prayed till morning—for Alex, for himself, and for the world.

When he returned from work that night Alex was in the hut.

"I—I've come back," faltered the lad. "I—I thought I could get away with " " but it was as if a voice was whisperin' in my ear, telling me to return. I'm ready to start for Sunrise in the mornin'."

"Glory be!" said big Sandy. He clapped his hand on Alex's shoulder. "There'll be no need for you to start for Sunrise, son," he said.

He drew a folded newspaper from his pocket and handed it to him. Alex read with terror and amazement the story of his crime.

The bullet had glanced off one of Templeton's ribs, inflicting only a trivial wound. After a perfunctory search the posse had returned.

"You—knew?" gasped Alex. "Why did you—?"

"To save your soul, laddie!" answered big Sandy. "Laddie, down on yer knees!"

New Universal Language

An employee of the State department has evolved a universal tongue known as "Euphony." Knowing 30 languages, he has borrowed their advantages and rejected their faults in producing a simple fundamental construction based on 15,000 root words. For every meaning or thought there is a particular word. He explains: "Euphony is something like mathematics. Take the word 'ole' for 'eye,' 'zu' meaning 'blue' and 'fra' from German, meaning 'woman.' Combine them thus, 'frazolca,' dropping the 'u' in 'zu' for euphony, and you have a woman blue of eye, or a blue-eyed woman. Euphony can be expanded and glorified for literature or contracted and simplified for commerce, he claims.

DOROTHY FROOKS

Dorothy Fooks, lawyer, athlete, aviatrix, war heroine and author, whose latest plan is to establish a poor man's court in New York city. During the war she was responsible for 30,000 enlistments and was one of the first women to enlist in the flying corps. In 1923 she was admitted to general practice in the United States District court in Porto Rico, the first continental woman to be given this honor. She is president of the Bachelor Girls' club, and says that she defies any man to marry her.

Hindu Women Advancing

In 1914 an American woman, Doctor Sender, founded a school of medicine in India, but it was not till 1918 that the first native students began to attend. "Hindu women are not intelligent enough to take their degrees," was the verdict of the director of the Madras School of Medicine. The results of the last years, however, have proved the exact contrary. Up to the present, 93 per cent of women students have obtained their doctor's degree, while only 20 per cent of masculine students obtained it, the Dayton News says.

If we remember that out of 185,000,000 women there are only 150 who have obtained the right to practice medicine and that many Hindu women would rather die than be examined by a man, we must hope that this feminine victory will spread and that the number of students will increase in the different schools of medicine in that country.

Famous London Spot

Cripplegate, London, England, was so called from the lame beggars who sat there as early as the year 1010. The gate was rebuilt by the brewers of London in 1244; and was pulled down and the material sold for £91 in July, 1700. On November 12, 1874, the poet John Milton was buried in the church then standing near Cripplegate.

Organ Tones From Piano

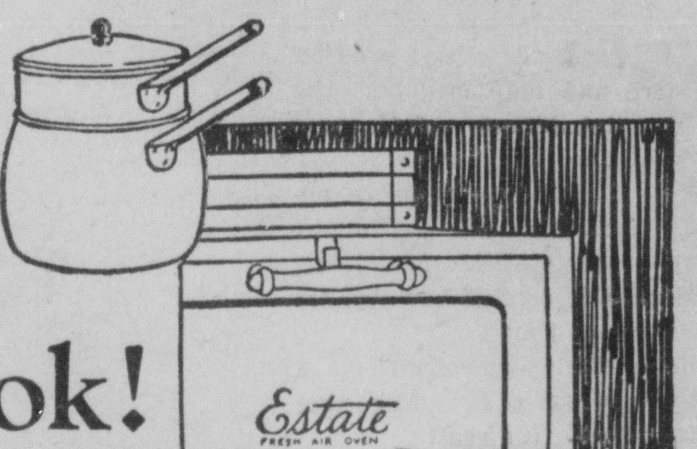

Tones of an organ, oboe or flute may be produced from an ordinary piano by placing tiny electromagnets close to the strings, say two French inventors.

When Honey Bees Will Sting.

Dark colors seem to be more offensive to bees than light, and the person dressed in dark garments should show more caution when handling these useful insects. Offensive odors are also objectionable to them, and the person recently returning from working in the stable or whose perspiration has a distinct odor should show some discretion in making himself familiar around the beehive.—Clintonville Gazette.

Must Radiate Heat

Even if a man could breathe, he could not live if his body were unable to radiate heat, says the bureau of mines after extensive experiments.

The Family Tweezers

When you recall the old days back in the boyhood home there is nothing dark about the picture except the thought of the tweezers and mother's firm inquiry, "Andrew, what are you limping about?"

"I didn't know I was limping," you said, at the same time putting your foot down flat to show her that every-thing was all right.

Taking your word for what it was worth under the circumstances, she asked to have a little look. She made you get down on the floor and put your foot in her lap, while your brother kindly volunteered to get the tweezers.

You reasoned with her, pleaded with her, and even accused her of wanting to hurt you, but she worked away until she finally brought a terrible scream from you and an ugly splinter from your foot.

Even now a shudder comes over you when you think of those tweezers and those awful words:

"Andrew, what are you limping about?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Extreme Edge

"Eleanor could be happy with any- body," said Henry, "only she must have sympathy."

"Diana blinked. 'She appeals to you very strongly, it appears.'"

"All her sex appeal to me very strongly," said Henry. "You see, I travel along the extreme edge of the straight and narrow, so most of the women I run up against are like my- self—on the right track, but only just, and liable to wobble off. Awfully nice people, you know."

"Diana smiled with tight lips.

"Don't you think that if you went along the middle of the road you'd meet nicer ones still?" she asked.

"Oh, nicer, I suppose, yes," said Henry, with a little sigh, "but for good company, give me the edge."—From "Mischief," by Ben Travers.

Fined For Possession.

Arthur Fox, of Five Points, arrested several weeks ago on the charge of possession of intoxicating liquor and who plead not guilty, changed his plea fine of $350 and costs by Judge Adkins. In default he was sent to jail, to guilty Saturday and was given a Juvenile Delinquents.

Lawrence Johnson, aged 15; Homer Johnson, 13; Harold Winfough 15, and Marvin Winfough 13, of Five Points, left their homes Sunday afternoon, walked two miles and broke into and entered the home of Park Brigner where they stole a watch, three suits of clothes, shoes, fishing tackle, gloves and a sack of marbles. After leaving the Brigner home they passed a ten-and broke the window panes by pitching rocks and before leaving chased a cat house owned by Taylor M. Dennis into the empty house and fastened the doors. The boys were arrested and taken before Justice Nelson Winfough, and a charge of entering an unoccupied dwelling in the day time was placed against them. They were brought to the juvenile court before Judge Adkins for a hearing.

The hearing developed that the boys are all users of tobacco; some chew while two of them admitted they smoke cigarettes furnished by older boys.
One of the Winfough boys admitted obtaining a bottle of liquor at the township house recently, claiming he found it and another admitted that he had entered Frank Porter's store and secured some articles.

Homer Johnson and Marvin Winfough, were the two boys that entered the Brigner home.

They have had no trouble at school and readily answered questions put to them by Prosecuting Attorney Ter-williger. Judge Adkins has taken the case under advisement and will hold the boys until he can consult with their parents.

When placed under arrest the boys admitted stealing the articles at the Brigner home and turned them over to Justice Winfough.

The boys do not seem to realize the enormity of the offense they committed. They related the story of the burglary innocently minus the brazen-ry of hardened criminals.

KNIT

Your College Boy's Socks and Sweaters.

Just because he is of the opposite sex does not mean that the youth of boarding school or college age is ignorant of the present difference between hand work and that done by machinery. Give him a present of a slip-on or golf hose that may be duplicated over and over in any of the shops and it is more than likely to be received with a marked lack of enthusiasm but knit one of these necessary accessories in distinctive colors and patterns that are only to be achieved by the work of individual hands and watch his reaction.

In the most exclusive habdashers and sports shops the fashions in hand knitted apparel for men are often extremely simple with no intricate patterns to follow. Color harmonies or contrasts while effective are easily reproduced even by one with a slight knowledge of knitting.

Rat's Deadly Work

At the end of a year a pair of rats and their descendants, if the progeny were unchecked, would number 1,130;
in four years they would number 11, 000,000. In six lunar months 1,130 rats would spoil and consume more than 25,000 loaves of bread.

Derivation of Rosary

The word "rosary" is derived from the Latin "rosarium," which originally was a garland of roses and used to crown the image of the Virgin Mary.
As a rosary, in its present use, it was instituted in honor of the Virgin by St.
Dominic.

LITTLE LADY HAPPINESS.

Sister of the daffodil, cousin of the rose Daughter of the silver moon in her summer clothes;
Round and round the sunny room of this world of cheer,
Little Lady Happiness—isn't she the dear!

Crowned as queen of morning light,
sceptered with a smile,
Up and let us follow her, bloomy mile by mile!
Dance with her and sing with her,
prance with her and glide—
Little Lady Happiness, bubbling so inside!

Winged as fairies of the sun, magical
as they,
Down she comes to lead us thru dark and care of day;
Wonderful as blowing dew, magical as rain—
Little Lady Happiness, bubbling so ining pain!

Playmate of the April wind, comrade
of the flowers;
Duchess of the lilac lanes, sister of the showers;
Here she comes and there she goes, a bubble and a gleam
Little Lady Happiness, lovely as a dream!
